MARTIN, Oci. 14, 1882. Editors Natches Democrat: Maj. Barksdale made a speech to-day, at Martin, before a large and sympathetic audience, in which he elaborated the position

be would take as our representative in the halls of Congress, and pledged his stainless honor to sustain the grand old standard of Democracy, the oriflame of the South.

To those whose home to the didicrous as was shown in that unstudied resort of the "whistle," creating in the minds of all an euphonious roar of laughter, so indigenous to the dusky natives soul. To those whose busy, toiling life scarcely permits them time to unriddle the good and able to the end, spicy beyond measure, and evil of politics it is instructive as well as resonant with the sound of cheering and the roar of the cannon that stirred the He dwelt upon the unjust and oppressive selements of the tariff, under which we have "old time" martial fervor.
